

Bhai, ab isko proper master-reference material ki tarah rakhte hain. Main har entry ko ek fixed format mein de raha hoon:

Short Briefing → Historical/Religious Significance → Nature & Landscape → What makes it special

Ek important correction: Gwaldam Garhwal aur Kumaon ke beech transition destination hai; Uttarakhand Tourism bhi ise dono regions ko straddle karne wala place batata hai. Isliye neeche ise Kumaon list mein rakha hai, but clearly marked as a transition area. (Uttarakhand Tourism)

Uttarakhand Tourism officially Garhwal ko Char Dham, glaciers, high Himalayan peaks, ancient temples aur major trekking landscapes se associate karta hai, while Kumaon ko lakes, forests, meadows, Panchachuli/Nanda Devi views aur cultural exploration ke liye highlight karta hai. Uttarakhand ko ek line mein samjho

GARHWAL = “Devbhoomi + High Himalaya”

Major identity:

Char Dham → Panch Kedar → Panch Prayag → glaciers → alpine meadows → high-altitude trekking → Ganga/Alaknanda/Bhagirathi valleys.

Garhwal ke core attractions mein Kedarnath, Badrinath, Gangotri, Yamunotri, Gaumukh, Valley of Flowers aur Hemkund Sahib jaise destinations aate hain. (Uttarakhand Tourism)

KUMAON = “Lakes + Forests + Culture + Himalaya”

Major identity:

Nainital lakes → Almora heritage → Kumaoni temples → Munsiyari → Panchachuli → Pithoragarh border culture → forests → orchards → village tourism.

Kumaon ki official tourism positioning bhi lakes, Himalayan peaks, alpine meadows, temples aur comparatively less-explored landscapes par heavily based hai. (Uttarakhand Tourism)

One important practical note for your final document: these 200 entries should not all be presented as “tourist destinations of equal scale.” Some are towns, villages, temples, passes, valleys, trekking bases, wildlife areas or viewpoints. That distinction actually makes the document stronger and more credible. Also, legends above are deliberately described as “local tradition/mythology” rather than historical fact wherever they are not independently verifiable.
